

James F. Taylor Dead

A FRIEND'S TRIBUTE.

James F. Taylor, after a lingering illness, died on the night of the 10th of June, 1894, at his home two miles east of Mt. Vernon. Mr. Taylor was born in Rockcastle county, Kentucky, on July 31, 1832, in which county he was raised and resided until his death. In his young manhood he was married to Miss Margaret Ramsey, a most estimable lady, by which union eleven children were born, nine of whom survive—six sons and three daughters. His beloved wife preceded him to the grave by about two years, and their remains now lie side by side in the family burying ground near their old homestead, "Uncle Jim" or "General," as many of his friends called him, was a good neighbor and a consistent Christian, being an earnest member of the Buckeye Christian Church, where he was ever found at his place in the Sanctuary when health permitted. As a husband and father he was devoted and indulgent, as a citizen he was law-abiding, patriotic and upright. Quiet and unassuming, he was as true as steel and an honest man. His example is worthy to be followed, and those near and who are dear to him, will not go amiss should they follow his footsteps.

"A faithful friend has left us,
We will see his face no more!
He has gone to meet his lov'd one
On the banks of the Golden Shore.
